

didn't know if both the 4.7 and 5.5 inch models would launch at the same time. Analysts have recently speculated there would be a delay between models.

The source was not named, but said an Apple Store leader mentioned October 14th as an "immense day for Apple" and that the stores would be busy through October.

A report last week suggested Apple is planning two events in the coming months. The rumoured September 16th event will cover the iPhone 6 with a further press conference in October covering iWatch, OSX Yosemite and new iPad and Mac hardware.

New features on the next generation iPhone are rumoured to include Near Field Communications technology to allow contactless payments, a super-sturdy screen - possibly made at least partially from Sapphire crystal, and a massively upgraded camera.

Apple are planning an unprecedented production run, with manufacturers being asked to assemble between 50 and 70m units before the phone's launch.
